Let it be remembered that, though this parish is one of the youngest, it is among the largest and most vigorous in the State, under the untiring zeal of the devoted rector, the Rev. Dr. Norton, it has increased within the last fifteen years from a mere handful to immense proportions, including nearly one-third of the entire while population of Frankfort. Twelve years ago Mr. John H. Bauna, in his laudable munificence, built the church at an expense of twenty thousand dollars. The congregation has so much increased as to require more room, and an addition has just been completed which makes it among the largest, if not the largest, in the State. A graphic and interesting account of its size, style of architecture and its consecration on last Thursday by Bishop Smith, assisted by Bishop Cummins and the clergy generally, was published in the Yeoman or this place. Bishop Cummins preached friedly night, and Saturday morning he consecrated "St. John's in the Widderness." about four miles north of Frankfort, and preached there to a congregation and the offern over the Benericon and the offern over the Beneric or the property of the supplies of of the supplies

THE ERIE RAILWAY SLAUGHTER.

What a Cincinnatian Saw and Felt. GRAPHIC DESCRIPTION OF THE TERRIBLE SCENE.

o, Agent in Cincinnati, was 'on the illfated train on the Eric railway, and hav-ing reached home on Saturday last, wrote out the details of what he saw for the Cincinnati Gazette. From his interesting narrative we take the following extracts:

I was woke about fifteen minutes past three o'clock a. m. by the jumping of one car over the ties, and the thought fisshed through my mind, "we are off the track."
instantly, I pulled my pillow round my bead to protect it, and drawing my feet possible, f awaited the result. I made no attempt to get up or catch hold of anything.

The next sensation was the car tumbling over. I turned over, I think, three times with the car. Once it seems as if I weet head over heels. The first thought I had after the car turned over was "Am I going to be killed?" and the next: "Will I ever reach the bottom?" It all transpired within a second or two, and yet the time seemed very long.

Reaching the ground, and finding that I had stopped, I jumped to my feet, and turning ground, looked to see whether the trucks, wheels, stove, or some other portion of the car was not tumbling down the bank which would overwhelm me. But it was dark. I could not see anything, and hearing no noise, I concluded I was safe.

I now called for my friends, Porter and Osborne, but received no replies. I called several times, but without avail. In a few seconds several begun to call ln looking around for blankets and coats, to cover up and make as comfortable as possible the wounded, I found both of my coats. One had been carried twenty or thirty feet in one direction, and the other had gone off at another angle. My satchel was carried fifty feet toward the river, and my shawi about ten feet from where I stood.

In the side pocket of my inside coat, I had a pocket-book which contained important papers. This pocket-book was torn to pieces, and the contents scattered around for quite a distance.

had a pocket-book which contained important papers. This pocket-book was torn to pieces, and the contents scattered around for quite a distance.

I am now satisfied that had I lain at full length in my berth and not pulled my feet up as I did, or had I attempted to get up and stretch my arms and to save myself, that I would have suffered more than I did, for the force that carried my satehel, coats, &c., to the distance where I found them, would more than probably have injured me severely.

While we stood together wondering as to Mr. Loomis' fate, who was in the burning car, and which we were unable to reach in our bare feet, the form of a man could be seen in the glare of the fire. His feet were in the air, he was literally standing on his head, which, with his shoulders, was so wedged in that he could neither move or speak. His legs were kicking violently in the air, and the flames had reached within a few feet of him. An instant more and he would have been entirely consumed. Mr. Oshorse, was the only one of us three who had boots on, rushed across the stream, and with the aid of two or three others who had come down the opposite bank, they in a moment procured a blanket, soaked it in the steam, and heid it up between the victim and the flanes. The wood was removed in less time than it takes me to tell this, and the poor man, with one arm almost burned off, and his reason gone, from the terrible suffering he had endured, and the consciousness of the position he had been placed in and yet unable to help himself, he rushed off in the direction of the river with the speed of a deer.

A woman was taken out from the same spot, but she was dead, and her remains were carried up on to a bank and laid out. About the same time a child five or shamed when Fernando Wood spoke the truth of the present "in/amous Congress," His Sulphurie Rightess must certainly have held up his head, and ceased to blush for his Radical Iriends, when he read the following in the morning papers a few days since:

"He it enacted &c, That no person shall be held fincompetent to act as a juror upon any Grand Jury by reason of having formed or expressed an opinion upon the matter to be submitted to such Grand Jury for investigation founded upon public rumor, statements in public journals, or the common listory of the times, provided he bo otherwise competent, and on his outh declare, and it appear to the satisfaction of the court that, notwithstanding such opinion, he can and will act impartially upon the matters

"Sixo. 2. That in trials for offenses against the United States no person shall be held to be incompetent to act as a jurore by reason of having formed or expressed and opinion upon the guilt or isnocence of the accused, founded upon public rumor, statements in public journals, or the common history of the times, provided he be otherwise competent, and upon his oath declare, and it appear to the satisfaction of the court that, notwithstanding such opinion, he can and will impartially try the accused upon the crime charged in the indictment or information, and a true verdite give upon the evidence to be produced on the trial, but the court may, in its discretion, set aside any such juror."

The clause in the Federal Constitution which declares that, "in all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by aumaratial jury," has been pretty generally understood as intended to place the great common law right of trial by jury beyond the danger of being tampered with by just such Knaves and ignoramizes as have concected the precious couple of sections cited above from last week's doings in Congress.

Juries, at the outset, were summoned from the vicinage, it is true, because, it was supposed, they might thus have some personal knowledge of the suitors, as well as of the matters to be investigated. But, in the progress of common law—for no more than Rome was it built in a day—it come to be established that cases should be tried by "impartial" in a day—it come to be established that cases should be tried by "impartial" in a day—it come to be established. at $4, $5 and $6--former prices, $6, $7 men; that is, they must have no pecuniary or other interest in the question to be tried, and their minds must be free from all predjudice or preconception of opinion. The formation and expression of an opinion was ground of "principal challenge" at common law. A man whose mind was made up beforehand, was deemed not an "impartial juror;" and it is the common law right of trial by an "impartial jury," as we have already intimated, that the Constitution

The Rise and Fall of a Great Firm.

[From the New York Correspondent Troy Times.]

In 1844 the great grocery house of Denison Belden, of New York, failed. This was a most unexpected misfortune, for they were an old and extensive concern, and were supposed to be rich. They numbered among their clerks two brothers of fine personal appearance, easy manners and of established honesty. They were an old established honesty. They were popular salesmen, and being very ambitious they determined at once to commence a small jobbing trade on their out merchants of New York. The efforts of these young men were first to live a papear and their troined and their troined and their troined and their troined the search of the war they were to be found the firm got rich, and at the commence of the war they were to be found the firm got rich, and at the commence of the search of the war they were to be found the firm got rich, and at the commence of the search of the search
